Why are we over-parenting, and what damage is it doing our children? Author of Cotton Wool Kids on why parents are more paranoid, stressed and competitive than ever before

Too many parents just don't 'get' huge swathes of what constitutes their kids' lives, reports Stella O'Malley, psychotherapist and author of Cotton Wool Kids: What's Making Irish ...

Yet in today's world where parents are paranoid by lurking dangers, we are raising a generation of children who we shuttle between organised activities, manicured parks and supervised playdates.
